

JON HARARI is CEO & Co-Founder of WindowsWear.com, the world's fashion windows & displays online in real-time. Jon co-founded WindowsWear.com with Mike Niemtzw (Chairman and President) and Raul Tovar (Creative Director), and the company has an amazing team headquartered in NYC with a client base of global retailers and brands including Ralph Lauren, Harrods, DVF, Tory Burch, Marc Jacobs, Michael Kors, Ann Taylor, Nordstrom, and more.

Jon also serves as an Adjunct Professor of Marketing at Baruch College and serves as a board member of Berkeley College's Fashion Advisory Board, and several charitable non-profit organizations in New York City. Prior to co-founding WindowsWear, he established U.S. market opportunities for top internationally-based designers through retail stores, wholesale, events, PR, and online. Prior to working in fashion, he was an investment analyst at Aurelius Capital Management, one of the world's top activist distressed investment hedge funds, and an investment banker at Lehman Brothers. He graduated from the Business Honors Program at Indiana University, magna cum laude, and is originally from North Potomac, MD and lives in New York City.

Saks Fifth Avenue
New York, September 2017

PXG installed a golf simulator experience to help measure angle, speed, spin rate and more to best fit inside Saks Fifth Avenues' store.

bloomingdale's
New York, May 2017

Father's Day window showcasing golf.

CANALI
London, September 2014

Canali was the preferred supplier to the Ryder Cup 2014 in Scotland.

LACOSTE
New York, September 2017

Lacoste became the official apparel supplier of the President's Cup in 2017.

New York, February 1936

Vintage golf scene window display in 1936.

Loro Piana

New York, September 2016

Loro Piana becomes the official supplier to European Ryder Cup team.

A | X

ARMANI EXCHANGE

New York, September 2014

Armani showcasing their golf collection in their window display.

UNDER ARMOUR

New York, May 2017

Under Armour showcasing their Spieth One collection in their window display.